EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Dear Archie Readers,

You may not want to hear this, but it's a fact. Summer vacation is over and it's time to go back to school.

When I was a kid, growing up in Brooklyn, New York, I always remember the summers being very hot. To cool off, you had to go to a public pool, the beach at Coney Island, a shady park, an air-conditioned movie theater (they weren't all air-conditioned) or just sit home in front of an electric fan. Two weeks out of the summer, my father had his vacation. This was special, because my parents and I went away together,usually to visit with relatives in Connecticut for one week and one week at a not so fancy hotel. I always looked forward to this time. It was a lot of fun.

Anyway, I always felt kind of sad going back to school. But that feeling usually didn't last that long. Especially when the teacher asked us to write a composition on how we spent our summer vacation. That was easy. See where I'm going with this?

I'd like you to send me a copy of your composition on "HOW I SPENT MY SUMMER VACATION!". If your teacher didn't give you this assignment, write one anyway. The best letters will win cash prizes and appear on the Archie Club News page. You don't have to be a member to enter.

NEXT MONTH...

be on the lookout for SABRINA'S HALLOWEEN SPOOOKTACULAR #1. Not only will this issue feature a special DAY-GLO cover, but there's a FREE pull-out poster inside. Don't miss out on this collector's edition.

GETTING GLASSES

A few years ago I found out that my vision wasn't right. My mom broke the news that I had to get glasses. I was afraid that I would be teased and laughed at from my friends. I heard kids with glasses were called "4 eyes" or a nerd because I thought glasses weren't cool. My mom started getting me books on problems like mine but I still didn't want them. Then came the day to go to school wearing glasses. My friends looked at me and said, "nice glasses." I was so surprised. I learned that kids with glasses don't change their image or personality, but just their looks.

BY SARA ALGASE

So I have this new baby kid in my house, and it's like a new experience. At breakfast I have my eggs, toast, cereal, milk, hamburger, peanut butter & jelly sandwich and banana split and little Jellybean has her bottle. (Mom says I should stop calling her that, but I like to.) So, I say "What are your plans for the day, Jellybean?" and she says, "Blicha Blubba Grubble Blum" (It's a myth that babies say just Goo goo ga ga. They say a lot of other stuff that doesn't make sense either.) So I say, "I'm going to school and have my midmorning snack and then have my midmorning brunch and then my lunch, and then midafternoon snack and then my lateafternoon after-school snack and then my pre-dinner snack and then dinner and then my evening after dinner snack. What are you doing today, Jellybean?"

"Graaahhhh!" she says, "I'm ordering out." (Just kidding.)

No one can stand to watch me eat. You see I mix my peanut butter with my hamburger with my cereal with my waffles. It really is a goopy mess, but Jellybean doesn't seem to mind. She even eats some. I can teach her a lot!

So then I'm off to school and Jellybean plays with her toys and she's into creative projects now I came home from school the other day and she had built a yacht entirely out of empty diaper boxes! She's a fast crawler, and I can teach her how to jog when she's older. I have a lot of practice running from Big Ethel!

She babbles a lot, but sometimes you can hear a word here and there. Like the other day she was saying, "Grubbly grubble grub who ordered pizza?" and then I heard her say, "Fribble glibble I want lemon meringue pie glimble." Gosh, she's going to be a smart one!

So that's the scoop with Jellybean Ice-cream to be exact. "Hey Jellybean! Don't eat it all!" Maybe now's the time for me to teach her how to share!

—Signing off—
